General Registers of Indian Indentured Labourers

The General Registers of Indian Indentured Labourers or girmitiyas (contract labourers) are part of the collection of Indian Indentureship records available at the National Archives of Trinidad and Tobago. They contain personal details of the movement of persons who were contracted to work on sugar plantations in Trinidad after the abolition of slavery. They are official records generated from 1845 to 1917, in compliance with several laws and regulations concerning immigration during British colonial rule.

The Registers document in great detail, the arrival of each of the Indian indentured labourers. They include information regarding the name of the ship on which they arrived, the arrival date, personal details such as their name, unique registration number, father's name, age, and sex, as well as the name of the estate to which they were assigned. A general remarks column provides additional information. The later registers provide substantially more details than the early registers. Details such as height, bodily marks, village of origin, estate assigned, return to India if applicable, and number and year of the Certificate of Exemption, were added.

There are 17 registers available at the National Archives of Trinidad and Tobago. The registers are in chronological order based on the arrival dates of the ships and are labelled alphabetically from Register A to Register R. Each immigrant's registration number is generally listed sequentially in the registers, except for Register B and C. Most of the ships recorded in the registers sailed from the port of Calcutta while a few sailed from the port of Madras. Register C documents the arrivals from Madras. Regrettably, one register for the period 1906-1909 did not seem to survive. Nevertheless, the registers remain a valuable resource for scholarly research and a starting point for tracing one's Indian ancestry.

The General Registers are among the Indian indentureship records that are listed on UNESCO's Memory of the World International Register as records of international significance in documenting a period of movement which was initiated and managed by the machinery of colonialism. Other records listed on UNESCO's register include ship registers, estate registers and other records, also available at the National Archives. Indian indentureship records of Guyana, Suriname and Fiji are also included on the UNESCO register.

NOTES ON GENERAL REGISTER B

¹The chronological sequence is interrupted with the addition of a few passengers from these three ships.

² There are gaps in the Registration numbers in Register B. The sequence from 13228 continues in Register C until 13606 (Roman Emperor ship from Madras 1858).

³The sequence of the Registration numbers continues from 14655 in Register C with the Palmerton ship (1859) from Madras, to 15429 with the Hope ship (1859). It appears that the ships may have arrived at the same time.

⁴The sequence of the Registration numbers continues in Register C with the Cleaveland ship records from 15979 to 16248

⁵The sequence of the Registration numbers continues in Register C with the Clara ship records from 16591 to 16966

⁶The sequence of the Registration numbers continues in Register C with the Bruce ship records from 17270 to 17670

⁷The sequence of the Registration numbers continues in Register C with the Chatham ship records from 18355 to 18604

⁸The sequence of the Registration numbers continues in Register C with the Hunter and David Malcolm ship records from 19248 to 19664
